

Harry Shannon

Above two dark photos of Harry dropping three youngsters in the dark while working his droppers. By the way, those (droppers) were nowhere near as good as the ones he had in 2000. There are three young ones on the roof just as they landed at around 1am. Notice the winter coat he is wearing. By this time I was an icicle, after all we are talking 29 of June. Irish summer! Notice how little light he uses while dropping the young ones. Some of those were not even six weeks old, yet they flew so calm and steady not nervous at all when landing.

The other photos are of his beautiful looking hens (left) in the fly pen and the closer two are Harry's young flyers, three of which I had the pleasure to time on the first young bird fly. Weather was anything but ideal, yet they still managed to win the Irish section with a time of 15.30. Lovely badges indeed, perfect for flying in the dark.
