

Here are some of Harry's cocks in the breeding section

Harry on a step ladder taking three and a half week old squeaker to the house roof, about fifty to sixty feet away from the coop. The little ones are then enticed to fly to the coop where one or two droppers are being worked. Right - his young flyers, three of which I had a pleasure to time on the first young bird fly. Weather was anything but ideal yet they still managed to win the Irish section with a time of 15.30.

Manuel Fenton

Manuel holding one of his almost pure white Tipplers...working hard to breed more pure whites. I'm of the opinion, it's only matter of time before he succeeds.

About the man...very down to earth makes you feel at home as soon as you meet him and it gives you the feeling as if you knew the person forever. On the fly day of July 1st he took me to visit different flyers but because of poor weather, to say the least, we were not able to see too many good performances or take pictures (rain, windy as well) So you see, it is not only us guys who have to put up with the bad weather. To the right - old pair, cock is 15 years old and still doing the job. Youngster from this pair are here in Canada, hopefully for many years to come. Top right - Manuel's breeders.
